There were seven of the hold-up men. Each of them, according to their victure, displayed an automatic pistol on entering the place. Three of the victure were in the front office and four of them in the rear, where John Law, Simbaum's chanfleur, was snoozing. Without disturbing Law in the least, the head of the gang called the other four men from the rear room.

After lining all seven of them up he told them to lie down and roll over on their faces, their heads to the wall. They did so, and he stationed a guard at the front door, another at the telephone, and set to work himself to search the prostrate men.

He was interrupted by the jangle of the telephone bell.

NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 25.—Jacob Haussling, four times Mayor of Newark, who retired from office seven years ago, died at his home here to-day from a knife wound which the police declare to have been self-inflicted. The ex-Mayor was for many years a Democratic leader and popular with prominent men of both political parties. After retirement from office Mr. Haussling suffered business reverses and the loss of a certain element among his former friends. His financial troubles arose from failure of a soda fountain equipment company, in which he was heavily interested. Disappointment at the loss of friends is believed to have led the former Mayor to take his own life. Examination of the body showed a knife wound directly over the heart. On the floor beside the bed was a carving knife. The body was discovered by Mrs. Haussling, who said her husband retired last night in apparently good spirits. The late Mayor was sixty-six years old on February 22. He was elected Mayor in 1906, 1908, 1910 and 1912. He was born in Newark in 1855, and was the son of Henry Haussling, leader of several German organizations of Newark. He married Miss Helen Ellicott on January 11, 1874. There are four children.
